

Contents

Preface

Acknowledgements

Introduction: Race, Politics, Sport

The International Assault on Racism

'White' Fragments of Empire

'Race' and Nation

'Race', Sport and Nation

Sport: Apartheid's Achilles Heel?

1. 'Sisters of the South': Intrusions of Racism, 1948–1960

2. After Sharpeville: Sporting Ambivalence

1960s Australia: Out of Step

Olympic Movement: Racism and Global Competition

Bilateral Competition: Widening Protest against Racism in Sport

3. Political Sport: Building the Anti-Apartheid Movement

Towards Sanctions in Sport

Overseas Roots: Local Issues

Hypocrisy? Anti-Apartheid Activism and Indigenous Struggle

Permanent Divide: Public Opinion

4. Arenas of Conflict: No More Tours

Anticipating the Springboks

Organising to 'Stop the Tours'

Turning Point: Rugby

'Honorary Whites': Tennis

Bradman's Gift? Cricket

'Not Apartheid Alone'

On field Success: Boycotting Team Sport

5. Sport and Apartheid: Rhetoric and Reality in the Whitlam Era

Limited Sanction

Against Racism: Beyond Sport

6. Bearing the Burden: Sport and the Wider Struggle Against Apartheid, 1975–1990

False Promise: Reforming Apartheid Sport

Ahead of the Game: Bipartisanship and Sanctions

Without a Cause: Rebel Sport

Beyond Gleneagles: Compromise Not Compliance

Sidelined: Sport and the Collapse of Apartheid

7. Anticipating Mandela: Dismantling Apartheid Sport 1990–1994

Conclusion

Notes

Index